

Officials inspire new heights in Good Hope

Monday, the Good Hope Council honored two of its longest-serving members and leaders as the Georgia Municipal Association gave out lifetime service awards to former councilman Truman Robinson and former mayor George Peters.

Family, friends and other civic leaders came out to see Robinson and Peters' widow, Ann Peters, accept the awards and to celebrate the 40 years of service the civil servants contributed to their community.

Both Robinson and Mrs. Peters spoke of the willingness shown to serve the city and the love held for the position.

It's an attitude more could stand to cultivate in the communities throughout Walton County.

Progress can only be achieved in the area with the willing and even eager work of people in the community to lend their time and effort to the cause.

Robinson and Peters both did more than their part to do just that in Good Hope and the honors in their name were a sign of the impact they had.

Yet Walton could use more of such men and women and we hope to see others step into the breach and do what they can for the community.

Take these two as inspiration and let's all do our part.
